CANNON GREEN
A Brief History of Class Day

The tradition of the Princeton Class Day dates back as early as 1856, and in 1898 was described as “a day over which the Graduating Class has full charge and which we run to suit ourselves, in our characteristic way.” Although seniors no longer smoke long white clay pipes before smashing them on the cannon, Class Day still features student speeches, remarks by the University President, and the presentation of awards. During the twenty-first century, prominent Class Day speakers have come to entertain and advise the class; recent speakers have included comedians, journalists, and politicians. Other elements of contemporary Class Day exercises include the presentation of a symbolic key to the campus by the University President, the wearing of orange and black class jackets, and the singing of “Old Nassau.”

A Brief History of Class Jackets

Senior class jackets, popularly known as “beer jackets,” are a common sight on Class Day. This article of clothing traces its origins to 1912, when a group of students decided to wear blue denim overalls and jackets to prevent beer from spotting their clothes. The following year, the Class of 1913 followed suit, but chose to wear white instead of blue. After the First World War, costumes were embellished with humorous logos, including jabs at Prohibition. Although overalls were abandoned following the Second World War, beer jackets have remained an integral part of Commencement activities. This year’s class jacket was designed by Michael Tran ’23. Perhaps someday we will return with our loved ones. We will show our friends and our children around the weird spots on campus that meant so much to us. Our children will gaze at us in our P-rade attire and orange and black face paint and ask “Mommy, Daddy, are you in a cult?” “We sure are, kiddo, we sure are, and it’s a hell of a cult too because I get to pay to be here.” But even if Princeton is a cult, or at least cult-adjacent, how could a place where a bunch of overachievers live and eat together for 4 years not feel a little culty? And we can’t deny the memories that will stay with us that have nothing to do with classes. The memory of our first time walking into a study break, or an eating club. Seeing our friends performing dance, poetry, comedy, theater, all while also being brilliant future neuroscientists. Getting your bike stolen by a rower. Almost being mowed down by electric scooters every day. Walking past Dillon Gym, overhearing Caroline Kirby’s spin class as I carry 2 pints of ice cream because I’m sad. Even the memories that are bad may become good in time. We had to push through a lot to get here, through COVID, through Zoom classes, through the return to campus, and we pushed and pushed and we did it and here we are.

Morgan Teman ’23

The first, last, and only class to have been accepted by Dean Jill Dolan, back in the good old days when an email from her contained good news, and we had not yet seen Rebecca Laziere’s daily dance on Princeton’s Instagram story. We certainly make Dean Dolan look like a one hit wonder with our collective accomplishments: we have spelling bee champions, Olympians, Broadway stars, professional musicians, nonprofit founders, and about eight hundred high school valedictorians... all this and more we’ve accomplished with less time on campus than any other class.
Riley Martinez ’23

One downside of this hustle-and-bustle culture, though, was that everyone was always too busy. If I had a nickel for every time someone said “let’s get a meal sometime” only for there to be no follow-up, I’d have enough money to contract a performance from Jason Derulo performing in his kitchen via YouTube livestream. People were always busy with something to do, but those close friends who made Princeton worth it always made time when it mattered most.

Elliott Weil ’23

The thing is we didn’t get 4 years of the Princeton experience. But you don’t need 4 years to know this place will always be home. You only need one sunny day in April when Poe Field is suddenly littered with picnic blankets, and Ticos mango slices, or one 2 AM night in Stone when delirium from studying has turned into rolling on the ground of B Floor laughing about that one TikTok, or the first night of Frosh-Week in the chemical toxic wasteland that is Cloister’s backyard, or whatever your Princeton moments are.

Ergene Kim ’23

The Class of 2023 has stood together during the unspeakably difficult times these past few years, standing by one another and moving through college with the quiet, mutual understanding that we have suffered as a collective. Last spring when COVID was infecting a lot of us, friends and roommates would make sure that those trapped in isolation housing got what they needed, whether it was dhall food or fancy takeout food or just good company. At the end, we have remained together, and we stand stronger for that. As we say our bittersweet goodbyes and prepare to move on — to the real world, the real, uncensored world that lies outside of this beautiful, at-times terrible, incredible Orange bubble, I want us to cherish what we have grown here — keep your memories of these chaotic college years close to your hearts, call your friends, don’t sell out too hard, and just remember — the Class of 2023 will always be here for you, no matter when or where you are.
Colin Vega ’23

So looking around here today, at the strugglers and hardworkers and failures and successes and squirrel-admirers that all of you are, I’m taken aback by what makes this the particularly great class of 2023 – we haven’t always been together. This exact group of people didn’t all gather together in McCarter for the SHARE Play or the Pre-Read discussion. We didn’t move in together first year, we didn’t get lost trying to find the ice cream social together, we didn’t get assigned orientation groups together. Many of us had circuitous paths, many of us bulled through and got it done as best we could, and I’m sure one or two smarties out there managed to get it done in 3 years, because of course they did – it’s Princeton. But what we have done? We’ve gotten together, right now. This group of people for the first time in history, and that, is something to smile about.

Richard Qiu ’23

As we exit Princeton’s campus, we will be proud of a few things: we love the cherry blossoms here, we’re clearly a basketball school, we are the best at turning things in 1 minute before the deadline, we can ctrl-F anything to get our precept participation credit, we can regurgitate “I pledge my honor that I have not violated the Honor Code during this examination” at any moment, and yet despite our massive brains we will never remember the lyrics to Old Nassau because quite frankly, who does? But unlike everyone else graduating in the class of 2023, we can always come back to the best university wearing our darn smelly beer jackets for the next 25 years... and realize that they still have that annoying one-ply toilet paper that does nothing except make you feel the burn and that they’re constructing another building.
Following the ceremony, seniors—denoted by class jackets—may pick up lunch for themselves and their four guests on Alexander Beach near Witherspoon Hall. If you return to Cannon Green to eat after the ceremony, please use the seats closest to Morrison Hall, as the other seats will be moved to prepare for this afternoon’s Graduate School Hooding Ceremony.

Please do not leave your seat to take photos. Note that any personal photos or videos taken during this event should be used for personal purposes only. Professional photographers take photos of all commencement events. Images are made available for free, courtesy of the University, at commencement.princeton.edu/photos.

Tune every heart and every voice,
Bid every care withdraw;
Let all with one accord rejoice,
In praise of Old Nassau

In praise of Old Nassau, we sing,
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Our hearts will give, while we shave live,
Three cheers for Old Nassau
